Instructions:

If you think your kids need more listening practice, read the story to your kids first. When I read stories with my students, I read a sentence in Spanish and then have students act out the story or draw it while I'm reading so they can show understanding. Feel free to say the sentence as many times as they need to hear it!

You can either tell the kids what the bolded words mean in English as you go or write the words on the vocabulary list.

If you feel like your kids have had enough listening practice from PQA and the movie talk and easily understand what you're saying in Spanish, feel free to just have them read the story.

An answer key for the reading activity is on p. 3.

Parrot

A. Read each sentence of the story first in Spanish and then in English.
